EMIGRATION TO THE RED RIVER AND TRINITY COLONY, TEXAS.

THE parties to the contract made by the Government of Texas, under the special acts and authority of Congress, for the Colonization of the Red River Colony, will be entitled to an interest in the purpose of Colonizing a portion of the vacant and unappropriated lands of the Republic, having formed themselves into an association called "The Texas Emigration and Land Company," appointed to undertake the expenses of Colonization, and to manage the affairs of the new colony. We would, therefore, respectfully invite to those who may wish to avail themselves of the liberal terms and conditions now offered by the Company, to settle in their Colony, that we have no doubt, at the present time, of the success of their emigration. A very intelligent and enterprising gentleman, Mr. Charles S. Housley, an intelligent and competent gentleman, who will at all times be prepared to receive and to locate to their satisfaction, without delay, those who may go there to settle.

To all emigrants who go to the Red River and settle in the Colony, one-half section of land, the Company will give to each and every family 200 acres of land, to be selected by themselves, upon paying to our agent, for the cost of the survey of the lands, and which they will settle at the rate of $100 per acre, and pay for the same in installments, the actual expense of the deeds and the record thereof included, and if the parties are willing to pay, a sum will be taken, bearing interest.

By a family is to be understood a man and his wife, with without children, a widow or widower, or two or more children, or a person of the age of seventeen years, dead each to be entitled to 100 acres of land in their own right, beside the 200 acres given to the family of which they are members.

Our Agent, Mr. Housley, will be retained in the interior part of the Colony, to receive applications for emigration, examine the prospective lands, for richness of soil, water, climate, and other advantages." Mr. M. Housley, also, who is an educated Scotch gentleman of high standing and intelligence, whom we sent there as a surveyor from the state of New York, has been engaged to superintend the operations of the colony, and the payment of the expenses of the agents and the record thereof included, and if the parties are willing to pay, a sum will be taken, bearing interest.

On the 1st of January, 1846, we will meet with prompt attention,

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

TUESDAY, January 27, 1846.

Prayers this morning by the Rev. Mr. WEILBURN. The Journal of yesterday being read and authenticated.

The SPEAKER arose and said: Before proceeding to the call for petitions, it was due to one of the members of the House, that the Speaker should make a few remarks. There was nothing of higher importance in the forms of legislation than that the presiding officer should take such steps as to secure harmony and good feeling among all parties in the assembly over which he presides. He was informed, he said, that, in the appointment of the committee on the Texas resolutions, on Saturday, he had given cause of offence to the gentleman from Green, [Mr. Murray.] His intercourse with that gentleman had always been of the most friendly character; and he felt assured that his avowal would be accredited, that it was far from his intention to express any disrespect towards that gentleman. When his mind was first called to the matter, he was ready to think that he had erred. But, on reflection, he was now impressed that he had taken the only correct and parliamentary course. The order was this. The gentleman from Green offered his resolutions. The gentleman from Fayette (Mr. L. Combs) moved their commitment to a select committee—avowing, at the same time, his friendliness to the resolutions, coupled with a disposition to amend them in point of phraseology. It struck the mind of the Speaker, that that gentleman, being the mover for the committee, had the right, by courtesy, to be appointed its Chairman, and he proceeded to make the appointment accordingly. But it did not follow, as a matter of necessity, that the appointment of the Chair should be respected in this case: for the committee of the Whole, and much more, a standing or select committee, might elect its own chairman. The Speaker thought, due to the gentleman from Fayette, having proposed to commit and amend, that he should have the chairmanship, in order to allow him the best opportunity to elaborate the whole subject, and present it before the committee in such form as he might think best. He did not purpose to destroy or neutralize the resolutions, but to improve them by a substitute: and the Speaker was careful to retain the gentleman from Green on the committee, that he might have the opportunity, if he should desire it, to sustain the original form of the resolutions, and defend them by submitting his views against the modifications of the gentleman from Fayette. Such a course was strictly parliamentary, where a member rises and moves to commit a bill to a select committee, with instructions to correct its phraseology: and he knew not why resolution should not come under the same rule. It was his impression that it should. Besides, the Speaker said, he had examined the 'Manual' with reference to this question, and had found the view which he had taken at the first to be confirmed by it, as well as by the experience of several gentlemen with whom he had since conversed. He had laid down for himself the principle of forbearance; and he expected the same at the hands of gentlemen. He desired, therefore, merely to reassure the House, that it had been, and would continue to be, his intention to extend to every member the utmost courtesy and respect, that might be compatible with his determination to maintain the strictest impartiality in all things pertaining to his position before the House.

PETITIONS, &c., were now presented by Messrs. FALLIS, DUDLEY, ABBETT, POPE and SEATON, which were severally received, &c., and referred.

Mr. L. COMBS rose to make an explanation and correction personal to himself. He had been misconceived in his brief remarks the other day on the postponement of the Salary bill. His remark was that the committee on Ways and Means had before them a proposition, (now before the committee on the Judiciary) to do away with several sinecure establishments here about Frankfort. He desired merely to say now expressly, that in that remark he had no invidious reference to individuals—no idea of imputing blame or censure to the incumbents of the offices, and establishments referred to—but he designed his remark to apply wholly to the establishments themselves. This remark, and explanation, he made in justice to himself and all concerned.
